When Mother Nature hits a cooperative territory with a bad storm that causes major damage and creates a multi-day widespread outage occurrence, cooperatives across the country look to their neighbors for help. Carroll Electric Cooperative Corporation (CECC) had to do just that following a major storm that hit their area over Memorial Day weekend.

Over 150 line personnel from neighboring cooperatives, along with area contractors, descended upon CECC headquarters in Berryville, Arkansas, to help rebuild services and restore power to their members. CECC serves approximately 118,000 member-consumers, and at the peak of their outage, they had over 64,000 reported outages. In addition to other damage to their system, they had over 1,000 broken poles.

Shelby Electric Cooperative sent a service truck, a digger bucket truck, and a double bucket truck along with Foreman Brad Wright, Linemen Blake Knearem and Nick Ray, and 2nd Year Apprentice Cade Helton to help CECC with repairs and restoration. "We cannot always answer the calls for assistance from other cooperatives when they request it from the statewide emergency work plan, but in this instance, we were able and happy to," said Manager of Operations Terry Oldham. "It has been a while since we have had to utilize the emergency work plan, but we are appreciative it is there should we ever need to use it down the road," Oldham continued.

"It is what cooperatives do, lend a hand when another cooperative is in need of help, and we appreciate the assistance from Shelby Electric Cooperative and the other crews who came in to help us restore power to our members," praised CECC President/CEO Rob Boaz.

The Association of Illinois Electric Cooperative's (AIEC) Emergency Work Plan (EWP) is coordinated by the AIEC safety department. The EWP is designed to quickly provide personnel and equipment to any member-cooperative that needs assistance during an emergency, in or out of state.

ROADTRIP

A family affair

Somewhere in the middle of Colorado, there used to be a small cabin that was surrounded by a few boats and tall grass. On the front of the cabin hung a red sign with yellow lettering that read No Bad Days. That sign would go on to impact how Tucker Schwengel lived his life and a motto that his family now carries on in his memory.

Located in Shelbyville, Illinois, is a small hobby farm owned by Kenny and Stephanie Schwengel called No Bad Days Farm. "When our son Tucker passed away in 2016, he and his sister Daley were working at The Great Pumpkin Patch," Stephanie said. "Following his passing, I was out one day pulling weeds in the strawberry fields, and I began to think about the idea of starting a farm. I realized that doing mindless, tedious work like pulling weeds was therapeutic and really made me feel better," she said. "We had always dreamed of having a Christmas tree farm," Kenny commented. "When our three kids, Alex, Daley, and Tucker were growing up, all of us would load up in the old blue truck and go cut down a Christmas tree," he said. "So, we decided to take that leap." In 2018, the first Christmas season at No Bad Days Farm was born.

As the Schwengel family began creating Christmas magic, they quickly realized that they needed more space, and in 2020, they began construction on the big red barn (pictured below) you see on the grounds today. Once more space was added, the events they offered started to expand. Each fall they hold a "fall day" consisting of local vendors, food trucks, as well as pumpkins and mums that they grow themselves. The spring season brings about "spring day," where they sell their homegrown vegetables as well as starter plant sprouts. In honor of Tucker's birthday in June, they hold a "Rhythm and Blooms Music Festival," which is a great event that brings live music to the farm. "Part of our goal with the farm is to give back to the community, while also offering inexpensive Christmas trees and produce that is affordable for families," stated Kenny. "We like to call it our hobby farm," laughed Kenny. "We don't do a lot of anything but do a little bit of a lot."

The Schwengels also give back to the community by providing the Christmas trees for the Shelbyville High School's Remembrance Wreaths Project. "Both of our grandparents were veterans, so we really have a heart for that," Stephanie commented. "We are also part of a program called Harvest Hosts, where RVers sign up, pay a membership fee, then get a list of places they can travel to and stay overnight," she said.

For the past four years, Kenny and Stephanie have held a Christmas dinner at the farm for anyone who has lost a family member or has someone missing from their table. “Since Christmas is not the same for us, we figured others might feel the same way,” Stephanie shared. The dinner has grown each year, with 18 people attending last year. They serve a traditional Christmas meal with turkey, ham, potatoes, and green beans.

“The biggest lessons we have learned are not to take anything too seriously and to love on people,” Stephanie smiled. “We are so glad we can provide something fun to this community by living by Tucker’s motto of No Bad Days.”

As the years have passed, Kenny and Stephanie’s girls have gotten married and started families of their own. Alex married Ryan Irvin and now has two little boys of her own, with a third on the way. Daley married Kaleb Pruemmer and has a little boy, with a second on the way. “We could not do any of this without the girls and their husbands.

They are so important to the success of the farm!” Stephanie said.

No Bad Days Farm can be found on Facebook and Instagram at No Bad Days Farm. While the farm does not carry regular business hours, you can follow them on social media and keep an eye out for their next event! The farm is located at 2300 E 1421 North Road, Shelbyville, Illinois 62565.

Thanks for riding along. I’ll see you down the road!
